Foreword by J. Christian Andersen

Author, Entrepreneur, World Traveller, Neurostrategist & Int. Certified ICC Coach

Finally a mature book on the subject “how to pick up a girl” written by a NLP practitioner that really understands the combination between social dynamics and your inner game. For too long the book shelves have been dominated by material of pick up artists that were more focused on your short term results than long lasting improvements of not just your game but also your life. Using the principles in this book you will get the skills to get deep connection with the girls that last. This is a great, original and truly new contribution about seduction and is a must read for all people serious in finding a partner – both for fun, friends, and for long term relationships.

INTRODUCTION

This may or may not come as a shock to you: The social rules you live by, are not something that you should automatically accept.

In most parts of the Western world, we drive the car on the right side of the road, right? So naturally, whenever we build new roads, we design them accordingly. You get into your car, and you drive down the road – always staying to the right, otherwise facing a rather bad accident just over the next hill. Well, did you ever stop to wonder why?

In the United Kingdom, they drive on the left side of the road. So, how did our predecessors come to the conclusion that we should drive on whatever side of the road?

Right now, you quickly scan all images accordingly, from the top-left corner to the bottom-right corner. You are pre-conditioned to do this, because you grew up learning to read from top-left to bottom-right. I bet that you are reading this document, from left to right, and your brain would probably give you a pretty hard time were you to try and change that for just 5 minutes. Have you ever thought about how this has come about?

In many cultures around the world, reading is from right to left. Pictures are scanned from right to left. Actually, many western companies mirror ad pictures used in the western world, so they can re-use the same ad with similar effects in societies where they read from right to left.

Why is it that we grow up and find ourselves believing that there is a soul-mate somewhere out there, waiting for us to find her?

These mechanisms are conditioned into our minds through society's norms and standards. We find ourselves operating within an institutionalized way of thinking; social boundaries restrict our way of thinking to such a degree that in relationships, we oftentimes settle for whatever we can find. We either get lucky, or we blame the world.

In fact, after many attempts of explaining people about the alternatives, I have experienced immense resistance to the sheer contemplation that the alternatives really do exist.

After all, embracing that the social boundaries are subject to your acceptance, were you 50 years old and without a notion of having met the beautiful people you deserve to meet in your life, would mean that you had to deal with 50 years of re-acting to social pressure as opposed to acting based on your inner desires. That, to most people, is impossible to accept. And so, on quite a lot of occasions, I have experienced simply brushing off this fact as ridiculous.

Accepting that there is an alternative which, once you get your first taste of it, will inevitably invite you to act or feel frustration that you are not, is a lot harder than just closing your eyes to the possibility in the first place.

Hey, I used to think that golfing was one of the most boring things in the world. Until I hit the ball clean and felt joy swoop through my entire body.

Everywhere around you, you will find more and more people acting outside of the box, in terms of social boundaries not defined by written laws.

This society has evolved through systematical information sharing enabled by mobile phones, the internet and low-fare airline tickets. They share a common set of beliefs and their communication holds more abbreviations than you would find in any corporate IT company.

Their numbers grow by the second. There are several hundreds of thousands of people around our globe that live by the alternative understanding of social dynamics and studies of powerful communication.

The society as a whole is known as the Seduction Community, and the most respected representatives are stars in their own right, conducting courses for newcomers seeking shortcuts in acquiring seduction techniques.

Today, as a professional coach in business, life & relation issues, certified with both ABNLP and ICC, I find myself in an extremely positive position. My coaching experience combined with my knowledge and application of how to break free of our social boundaries, helps me live an extremely fulfilling life. I get to help tons of people realizing and living to their potential – every day – and I find many rewards in witnessing the personal success of the people I interact with.

I am often contacted by the press, wanting expert comments; to write about our courses or similar. Usually the press wants real people to interview and we always pass the opportunity onto our clients on a voluntary basis.

Many decline, simply due to the fear of being judged by those unwilling to accept their desire to improve their lives in this category. How about an alternative viewpoint here: It is OK for you and your wife to go see a marriage or couple consultant / therapist, and it is not OK with you that others seek to improve their ability in choosing life partners, so that they need not invest in a therapist? How does that make sense?

Chances are that the next guy you see successfully walking up to a group of people in a club is a member of this society. Several hundreds of thousands of people have embraced the alternative understanding of social dynamics, and at this very moment enjoy exceptional personal freedom.

You have the choice to do the same, and the right time to make a choice is always now.

So, now that you are making that choice, let me help you. In this book you will discover:

- How to set great goals for yourself and others
- Why you can only experience success when going out from now on
- The basic ingredients of natural “game” and exercises to make it work for you
- How to reframe virtually all situations into positive learning experiences
- How to translate negative social input into positive social dynamics

And much, much more...

On the next page you will find sample content from the book, I hope it will spark some thoughts and inspire you to read the full version.

GUIDING PRINCIPLES OF NATURAL SEDUCTION

You must measure yourself on your ability to act, and evaluate the results of your actions independently of your potential.

- Consequence: Consciously reframe externally referenced goals into internally referenced goals, and enjoy the power of acting.

You must seek to establish a frame of positive communication and thereby open a window of opportunity, and it is your ability to act on your nature and communicate freely that drives open that window.

- Consequence: Approach people and say whatever positive thought or observation comes to mind!

You must enforce a frame of sensual communication immediately upon identifying that you are attracted to someone, thereby widening the window of opportunity.

- Consequence: Touch people physically from the first second you internally acknowledge your interest in or attraction to them. This includes guys!

You must communicate in terms of emotions and values in order to create genuine and long-lasting connections, thereby widening the window of opportunity.

- Consequence: Help your counter-part bring forward what they value and the emotions associated with this, and tell them how you feel about it.

You must follow through on the communication that you are sending out through the frame of sensual communication, in order to make the window of opportunity stay open.

- Consequence: Be brave, and walk the talk of principle #2. Always reward positive behavior of your counter-part with escalation.

You must respect the counter-part in the positive and sensual communication frame, and move forward together in the pace that arises within these frames, thereby ensuring that one of you can move through the window of opportunity.

- Consequence: Communicate with ambiguity so that the counter-part can decide to move through the frame. Close the deal when it is natural to the both of you.
